

Statement of participation

Punit Rajput

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

Myths in law

This free 10-hour course explains some of the key features of the criminal justice system and criminal law.

Issue date: 23 June 2026

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:
<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/society-politics-law/myths-law/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: W111_1

Myths in law

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/society-politics-law/myths-law/content-section-0>

Course summary

This course looks at some of the biggest myths around criminal law and criminal courts to see how accurate a picture they are painting. Is it true that all criminal cases are tried by jury and convicted criminals are really let off without prison sentences? It explains key features of the criminal justice system and criminal law.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- explain some key features of the criminal justice system
- describe some key features of the criminal law
- understand the truth about the biggest myths around criminal law and the criminal courts.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

'Criminal cases are tried by jury'

Section 2

'Most judges are old, white men'

Section 3

'The police enforce the law'

Section 4

'Crimes are immoral'

Section 5

'All crimes have victims'

Section 6

'Convicted criminals are let off without prison sentences'

Section 7

'Criminal law and civil law are completely different'